The Development of Higher Education in China

Biography

Wang Xueshuang, Ph.D., Assistant Professor, College of Education, Beijing Sport University. She graduated from Faculty of Education, Beijing Normal University. She got her bachelor degree in education program, master and doctoral degree in international and comparative education program at Faculty of Education at Beijing Normal University. She was a visiting scholar at school of education, University of Pittsburgh from September 2015 to November 2016.

Her research interests mainly focus on international and comparative education, graduate education and physical education. The research theme of her Ph.D. dissertation is doctoral students' learning experience in the United States. Currently, the research projects she does and participates include: "The Employability of Doctoral Students in the United States", "The System and Model of Third-party Education Evaluation" and "The Development Strategies of International Branch Campuses for Higher Education Institutions in China". She teaches the course of "The Theory of Education"; "The Introduction of Research Method and Methodology in Social Science" and "Comparative Education".

She has presided over or participated in more than 10 international and national research projects and published more than 10 academic journals in Chinese and English. She has given presentations in the United States, Canada, Japan and Cambodia for international academic conferences.